More than half the companies that suffer a major disaster go bankrupt – despite insurance against natural hazards and operational interruptions. This is because, if a company is unable to produce its goods or services for too long, it loses its customers.

Every effort must therefore be made to be able to resume production as quickly as possible in the event of a major event (fire, flood, etc.). We achieve this by creating tailored business continuity management plans for our customers.

Business continuity management

When the worst case scenario becomes a reality, scrupulous preparation is everything!

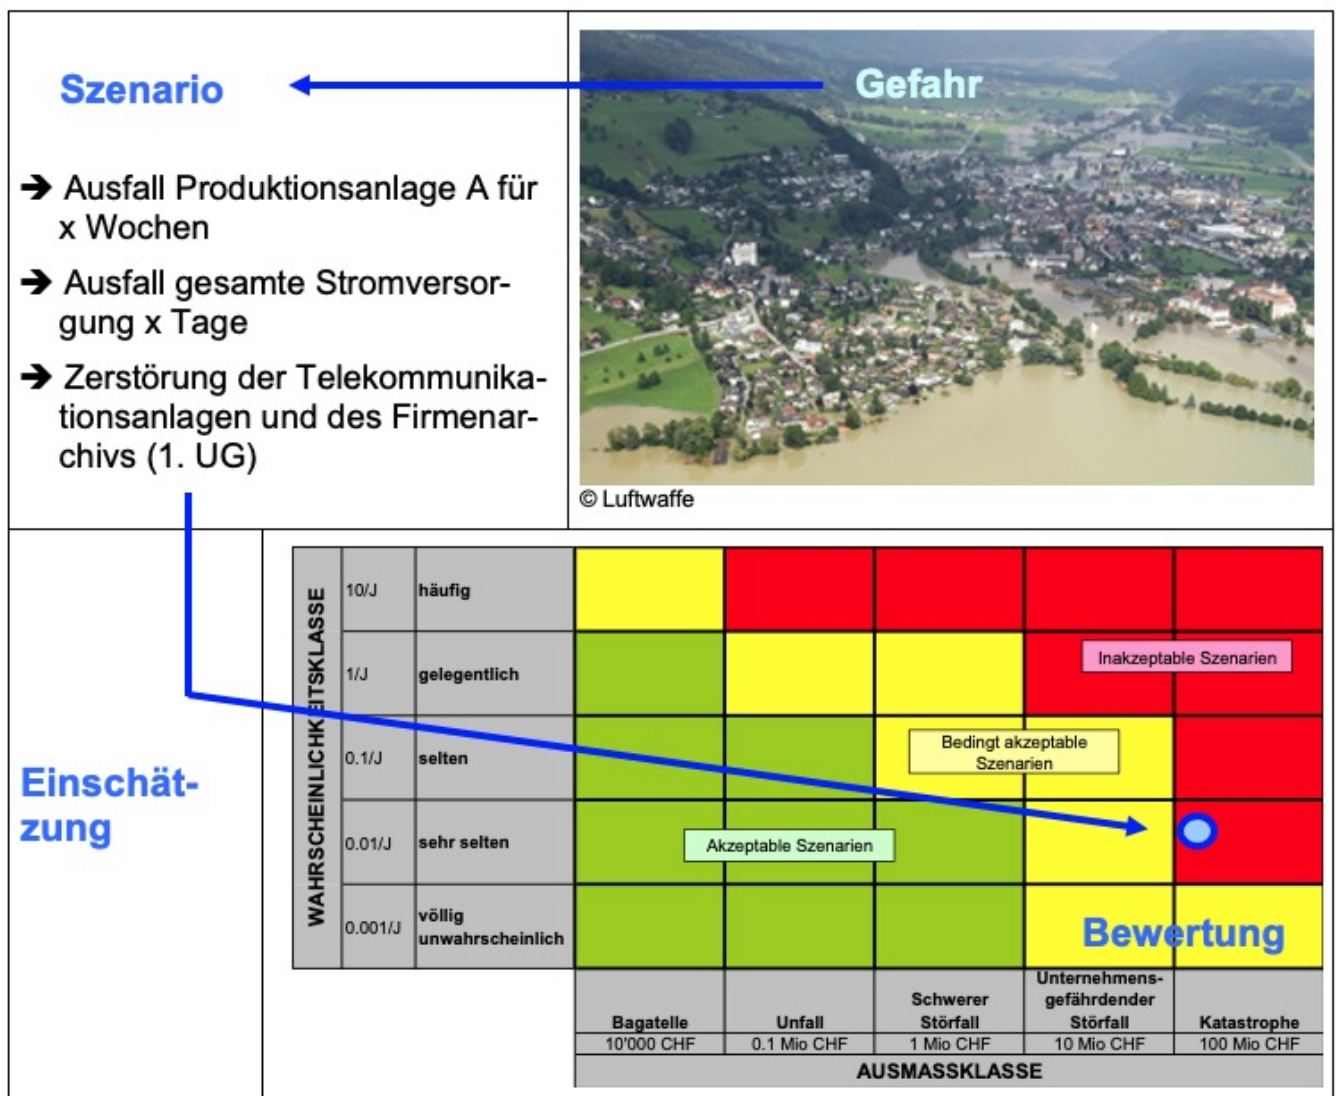

How can a company's survival be assured?

How can the company's most fundamental values (production capability, customers, and so on) be preserved?

Business continuity management means:

- Systematic analysis of the company's value chains.
- Recognition of the dangers threatening the company.
- Assessment of the risks threatening the company.
- Preventive planning and management plans for worst-case scenarios.

Our specialists are here for you!
